

Activity 7. Predicting the Future

Instructions: Many factors are reshaping the world we live in. Some are gradual, some relatively rapid, and some are below the surface and then suddenly appear. There are trends, cataclysms, and tipping points. These forces include climate change, technological innovation, economic development, human migration, war, disease, and famine. Historians cannot predict the future, although it is tempting guess. Image it is one hundred years from today and you are a journalist working for a popular magazine. Write an article in which you discuss how the world has changed over the previous century. In your article, before to discuss what the world will look like in the future and the changes that had the greatest impact.